

January 17, 2019

Program: Organics and Food Security

Presenters: Frank Dehne and Justine Dobson

Frank Dehne has been an organic gardener for the last 50 years. He grew up on a small cattle farm in western Oregon. He is an organic farm and livestock inspector in the Midwest.

Justine Dobson is a retired chiropractor. She has been an avid organic gardener for 25 years, raised laying hens for eggs and Cornish crosses for the freezer. She is also an organic farm and livestock inspector.

- Organic food and why we need it.
 - Pollution of waterways
- The loss of avertable land and lawns.
 - Keeping up with the Joans'
- Economy of urban home and the family farm.
 - Home economics
- Lawn versus food - the cost of beauty
 - The labor of grass
- Edible Yard Landscaping Design
 - Food landscaping